In 2005 Hanson decided that it would specify electric tarps on all its truck and trailer purchases from 2006 and beyond. This decision was made as manual operated tarps were contributing to shoulder injuries in our ageing workforce.

We initially chose Razor because of their experience with landing legs and their manual override capability, as we were unsure at first of how reliable electric tarping would be. The motors have proved to be very reliable and we have been pleased to see Razor continue to develop their products.

We are particularly impressed with the Razor's latest development – remote control tarps. We specified them on our new Hercules B-double tipper and our drivers are delighted with how safely and easily they can now tarp their loads.
